To Dr. John A. Kouwenhoven

—Who has shown us that in such diverse things as a milling machine, Jefferson's Monticello, New Orleans Jazz, Tom Sawyer, a comic strip, New York's skyscrapers, we may see a phenomenon truly American.

—Who has more than anyone we know answered the question "What is America?"

FOREWORD

American muse, whose strong and diverse heart
So many men have tried to understand
But only made it smaller with their art,
Because you are so various as your land,

As mountainous-deep, as flowered with blue rivers,
Thirsty with deserts, buried under snows,
As native as the shape of Navajo quivers,
And native, too, as the sea-voyaged rose.

Swift runner, never captured or subdued,
Seven-branched elk beside the mountain stream,
That half a hundred hunters have pursued
But never matched their bullets with the dream,

Where the great hunstmen failed, I set my sorry
And mortal snare for your immortal quarry.

You are the buffalo-ghost, the broncho-ghost
With dollar-silver in your saddle-horn,
The cowboys riding in from Painted Post,
The Indian arrow in the Indian corn,

And you are the clipped velvet of the lawns
Where Shropshire grows from Massachusetts sods,
The grey Maine rocks—and the war-painted dawns
That break above the Garden of the Gods.

The prairie-schooners crawling toward the ore
And the cheap car, parked by the station-door.
Where the skyscrapers lift their foggy plumes
Of stranded smoke out of a stony mouth
You are that high stone and its arrogant fumes,
And you are ruined gardens in the South

And bleak New England farms, wo winter-white
Even their roofs look lonely, and the deep
The middle grainland where the wind of night
Is like all blind earth sighing in her sleep.

A friend, an enemy, a sacred hag
With two tied oceans in her medicine-bag.

And now to see you is more difficult yet
Except as an immensity of sheel
Made up of wheels, oiled with inhuman sweat
And glittering with the heat of ladled steel.

All these you are, and each is partly you,
And none is false, and none is wholly true.

For as we hunt you down, you must escape
And we pursue a shadow of our own
That can be caught in a magician's cape
But has the flatness of a painted stone.

Never the running stag, the gull at wing,
The pure elixir, the American thing.

And yet at moments when the mind was hot
With something fierier than joy or grief,
When each known spot was an eternal spot
And every leaf was an immortal leaf,

I think I have seen you, not as one,
But clad in diverse semblances and powers,
Always the same, as light falls from the sun,
And always different, as the differing hours.

Yet through each altered garment that you wore,
The naked body, shaking the heart's core.

* * *

And I have seen and heard you in the dry
Close-huddled furnace of the city street
When the parched moon was planted in the sky
And the limp air hung dead against the heat.

I saw you rise, red as that rusty plant,
Dizzied with lights, half-mad with senseless sound,
Enormous metal, shaking to the chant
Of a triphammer striking iron ground.

Enormous power, ugly to the fool,
And beautiful as a well-handled tool.

* * *

This flesh was seeded from no foreign grain
But Pennsylvnia and Kentucky wheat,
And it has soaked in California rain
And five years tempered in New England sleet

To strive at last, against an alien proof
And by the changes of an alien moon,
To build again that blue, American roof
Over a half-forgotten battle-tune

And call unsurely, from a haunted ground,
Armies of shadows and the shadow-sound.

* * *

Receive the dream too haughty for the breast,
Receive the words that should have walked as bold
As the storm walks along the mountain-crest
And are like beggars whining in the cold.
The maimed presumption, the unskilful skill,
The patchwork colors, fading from the first,
And all the fire that fretted at the will
With such a barren ecstasy of thirst.

Receive them all—and should you choose to touch them
With one slant ray of quick, American light,
Even the dust will have no power to smutch them,
Even the worst will glitter in the night.

If not—the dry bones littered by the way
May still point giants toward their golden prey.

Thursday Noon Meeting

Many of us have found security in a belief; still more of us are in quest of one; but most of us will agree that our existence is meaningful as we contribute to the world around us. We regard our college both as one that takes from this world and gives to it, for in learning about our world and times we become people able and willing to participate in the affairs of the community and to make it a better one.

From all over the city, from all over the nation, and from abroad we come to the Barnard community. Here we meet new people and exchange ideas and experiences. The community—be it New York City, Morningside Heights, or the little world that is Barnard College—serves us in many ways, and we in turn can serve it. The city, the neighborhood, the school—these are part of the larger community that is America.

The past is fascinating and crucial to our understanding of the present. Where did we begin? How have we progressed? To what do we owe our great ideas and discoveries? These are the questions we ask of history and to these it must respond in its answer of all that has gone before us from the Acropolis standing high above Athens to the blue-print of the cobalt bomb.

All that we are and all that we can ever be is in the province of history for we are wedded to time; and it is through the understanding of the Temporal process that we understand our particular relationship to it and our place in the world.

We find aurselves in a complex warld and through science we try ta understand it; we are not left campletely baffled. We da have some insight into the unsalved prablems of our universe, same ideas as ta the principles af matter, the structure of the earth, the bialagical nature of man. Hawever, we are canstantly questioning and searching. We turn nat only ta baoks, but to aur awn experiences, experiments and observations. We move fram the Barnard labaratary of test tubes and mazes filled with frustrated mice ta the sphere of practical application. Prabing into scientific phenomena, we get some understanding af the aspects af aur enviranment which are a part of aur daily experience.

THE RED FLOWER

We have seen the sky torn apart
And fire pour out.
We have seen great mountains burst into bloom,
And the oak trees cleft,
And the grass withered,
And over the wheat fields the devouring blossom,
The red flowers rising like tongues,
Consuming the golden wheat in their hunger;
And the flower opening like a rose in the heart of the city,
Its petals spreading, searching the halls of the houses;
The perfume of a child burning.
We have seen it poised on the masts of ships,
Climbing them like a vine,
And the purple clusters of grapes
And the red juice that spilled down.
This drink has been our drink,
This fragrance a thing we have known:
The bitter taste of loss,
Of helpless, Pain,
Of burning.

THE TITAN
THEUS

But never before you came,
Titan breather of life,
Who piled our mountains up to the sky—
Never before you came
Have we seen a man reach up
And seize in his hands the flames and chain them there,
Fitted and welded to the end of a stick,
Imprisoned in the flakes of the steel-cold flint,
In the crucible, in the forge, in the safely containing hearth,
The red flower warming, the golden hunger feeding
To work, to serve, to form, to forge, to blossom out of its flame
Golden wheat of the soul,
Purple wine of the mind,
The houses, the towns, the cities, the sun-gilded towers;
Knowledge of good and evil, the scarlet forbidden fruit,
The rose and the heart of the flower:
Reason that makes us gods.

. . . whether we choose the theater, the delights of being a gourmet in New York City, partying, or wishing . . . whether we are intellectuals or non-intellectuals who do like television, or if we prefer even more sedentary pleasures, our pastimes are valuable to us as they contribute to making us more interested, interesting people. The thought of free time is not a sceptre of impending boredom; rather it is an exciting opportunity to ski down a slope in Vermont, see a downtown production of Measure for Measure or just talk.

LET US GO NOW

"Thither every-day life, speech, utensils, politics, persons, estates: Thither we also."

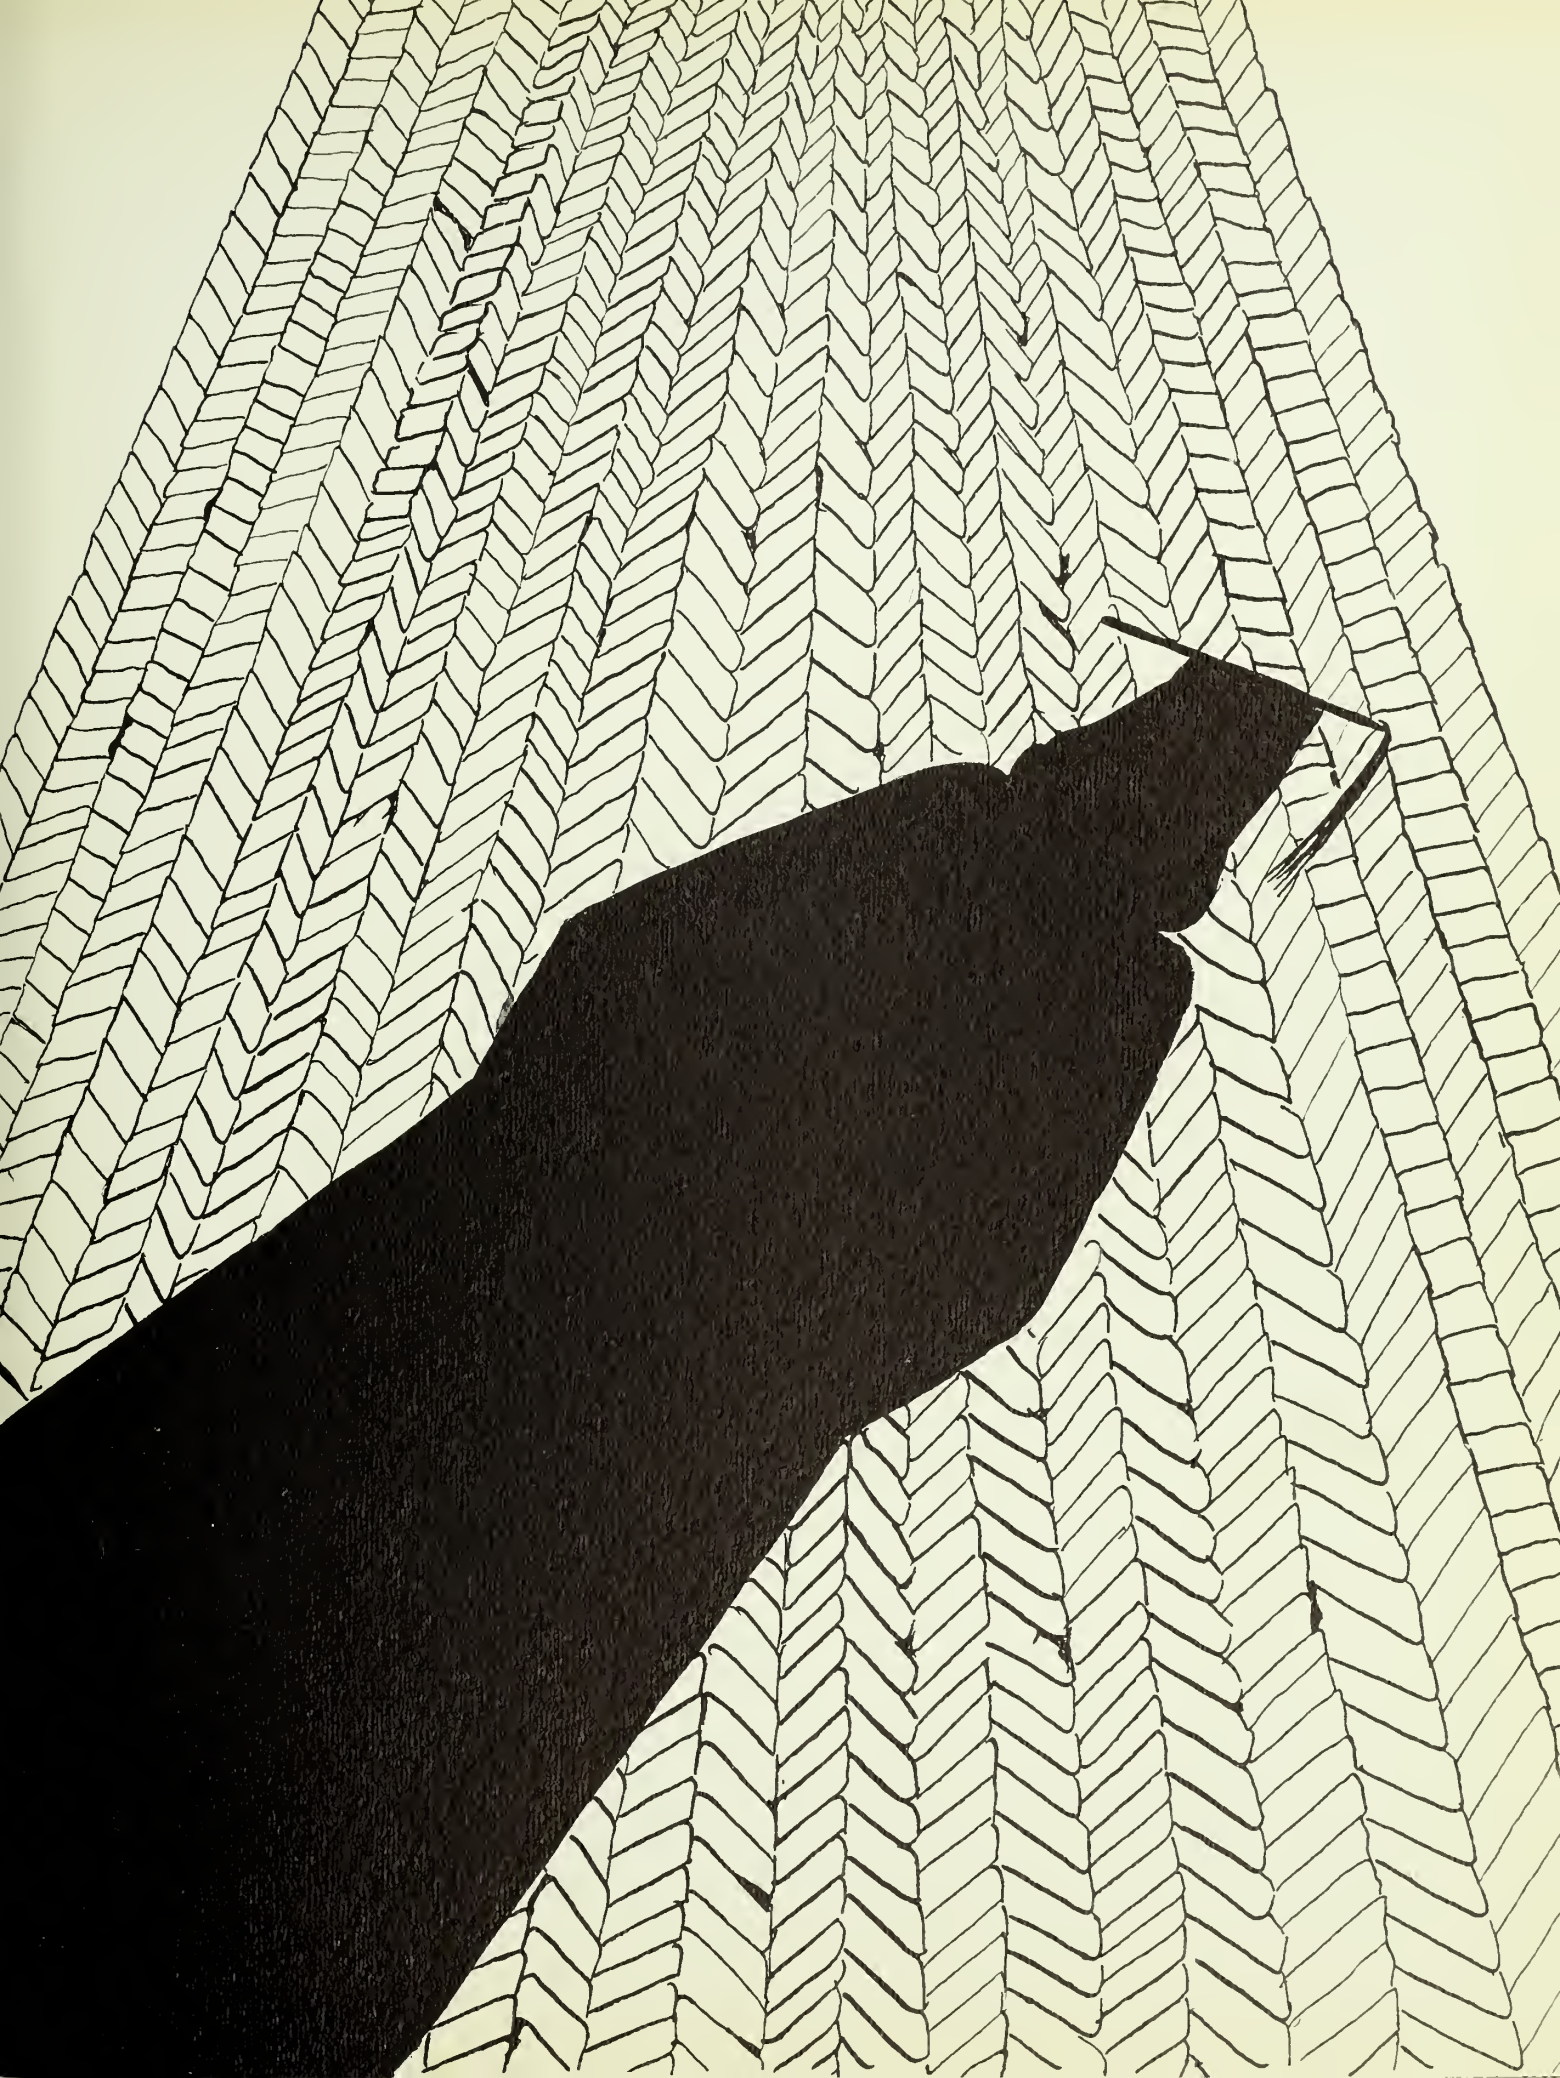
—Walt Whitman



"Such an occasion as this is a day of genuine importance in the lives of you who are our departing students. For some of you, these ceremonies will mark the end of your formal years of study. For others, Autumn will bring the new experience of further study, here or elsewhere, in the specialized fields of your professional choice. For all of you, a time of abrupt change in the routine of your lives has come. If, on such an occasion I may be permitted to suggest one parting word of counsel, it is this: take care to keep your intellectual tools bright and sharp. The cutting edge of a mind becomes dull with disuse. Most tools with which you are familiar become dull if they are used excessively. Not so with intellect."
